Consultation regarding Child Development and Using Services

There is a development support corner (nicknamed "Ai-Ai") located in the Comprehensive Children's Center where specialized staff members offer consultation regarding child development and the use of relevant services.

When necessary, the corner also conducts developmental tests, designs support plans, offers advice about day care services, and provides information on relevant institutions.

Child Development Support and After-School Day Care Services

Children are encouraged to develop their language, comprehension, and motor skills and are taught useful skills for everyday life through group and individual activities. There are various types of services, such as individual day care groups for children only, family day care groups, preschooler groups (all of the aforementioned are for children who have not yet entered elementary school), and individual instruction (for children who have not yet completed the second grade of elementary school). Legally designated fees are charged.

At-Home Childcare Support

This service is for infants and toddlers who cannot go to child development support services due to the child's condition or family situation. Day care workers visit the home, provide instruction on how to play and perform everyday tasks, and provide other helpful information.
